

PREPOSITION

DON'T USE PREPOSITIONS AFTER THESE VERBS:-

(because these verbs are transitive they must have an object):-

These verbs are generally followed by a preposition “to” in errors.

Omit that “to”

Meet, join, obey, violate, ask, bid, tell, Inform, remind, warn, thank, advise

Reach, resist, resemble, attack, afford, demand, comprise, investigate, enter, flee, explain, describe, discuss, disobey, order, stress, emphasize, await, despite (preposition) etc.

We should discuss about this issue in our next meeting.

They can't resist to the temptation of watching that movie.

Mohan resembles with his father a lot.

If you come late, I will inform to your parents.

Einstein explained about the theory of relativity.

He entered into the office without making any sound.

Sheetal entered into an argument with her boss.

Police haven't controlled over the mob even after 7 hours.

They have no control over their children that is why their children keep on doing such activities.

Some unknown men attacked on the travelers as soon as they entered the jungle.

Some terrorists were arrested yesterday who were planning an attack on the Lal Quila.

All the members stressed on the implementation of the new policy.

If you want to bend this rod, lay some stress on it.

I will demand for more money from my father in law.

I can't fulfill his demand for more money.

I must order for a cup of tea as I am really tired.

Sushil received an order for a cup of tea 30 minutes ago.

This collection comprises of 300 old coins from various countries.

This team is comprised of 11 players from various countries.

I met with my friend when I went to Delhi.

He met with an accident last year.

He repeated their conversation with Rohan word to word to me.

Speakers after speakers went to the podium to deliver their speech.

Mr. Gupta divided all his wealth among each of his sons.

Everyone but she was present at the function so everybody got worried.

She is not here as she went to Delhi with her husband on last Monday.

You needn't worry at all as I will come there on Monday next.